HABILITATION
The Habilitation is an academic qualification that allows you to become a lecturer at a German university and is often a prerequisite for a tenured position. The habilitation requires the candidate to write a thesis based on independent research activities and to defend it before a committee. In addition, teaching experience is required and will be evaluated as part of the habilitation process. You will find more information the requirements for a habilitation at UMC Mainz here. HEALTH CARE AND INSURANCE

Health insurance
It is essential that foreign academics and their family members take out health insurance coverage that is valid for Germany.

Please contact your health insurance provider at home to find out whether doctor's and hospital fees incurred during your stay in Germany are covered. The insurance company must confirm in writing that your insurance coverage also applies in Germany.

If the health insurance from your home country does not cover Germany, it may be possible to obtain private medical coverage in Germany. In this case, please contact your supervisor in advance, before arriving in Germany.

Please note that costs associated with certain illnesses or treatments, for instance chronic illnesses, are not usually covered by private health insurance policies in Germany.

Please be sure your health coverage starts upon your arrival in Germany! The relevant local office for foreigner affairs (Abteilung für Ausländerangelegenheiten) will require proof that you have health insurance coverage before it will issue you a residence permit.

An overview of this information and the regulations that apply to Residents and Citizens of the EU and to those from all other countries is available from EURAXESS and from Krankenkasse Zentrale.

Private liability insurance
In principle, everyone in Germany can be held liable for any damage he/she has caused up to an unlimited amount. A private liability insurance policy (Haftpflichtversicherung) will cover any related claims, i.e. resulting from material losses or physical injury.

It is therefore essential that you take liability insurance, especially as this is not expensive. There are many insurance companies offering private liability insurances.

VISA

Visa regulations:
The German Federal Foreign Office provides information on current visa regulations here.

Entry and Residence Permit
The Federal Ministry of the Interior, Building and Community offers information on entry regulations and residence permit issuance here.

Visa Application for the Federal Republic of Germany:
In order to be eligible for a Aufenthaltsgenehmigung, you must apply for a visa from the German consular representative with jurisdiction over your place of residence in your home country.

The UMC will send you a letter of invitation which includes a mention of the duration of your stay in Germany, confirmation of the fellowship received from the UMC verifying that it covers your living costs; confirmation of accommodation and health insurance and finally confirmation that the fellowship is from public funds for the purpose of performing scientific research in Germany.

Once you have submitted the letter of invitation to the local German consular representative, you will receive a visa in your passport. The visa includes your name, the expiration date and mentions that it is only valid for work as a scientist at the UMC (Erwerbstätigkeit nicht gestattet ausgenommen Tätigkeit als Gastwissenschaftler an der Universitätsmedizin Mainz).

Usually, the first Aufenthaltsgenehmigung is valid for a maximum of 3 months, during which it must be extended at the local office of foreigner affairs (Abteilung für Ausländerangelegenheiten), provided you are registered at the registration office (Einwohnermeldeamt).

It is important to note that this visa does not permit you to travel to other European countries because it is not an Aufenthaltsgenehmigung according to the Schengen Agreement. However, once you receive a residence authorisation from the local foreign registration office (Ausländerbehörde) in Germany, you are allowed to travel to other EU countries.

If your spouse and/or children plan to travel with you, their full names, birth place and date of birth must be included in the written confirmation you receive from the UMC. If they plan to travel at a later date, a similar form must be filled out. Family members must always apply for a visa to visit Germany. If family members wish to stay longer than the expiry date in their visa, they must apply for an extension at the local foreign registration office. When the visa expires, the family members have to return to their home country and apply for a new visa should they wish to return to Germany.

REGISTRATION AND RESIDENCE PERMIT AND REGISTRATION
The Federal Office for Migration and Refugees offers a brief overview of the steps you need to take to receive a residence permit. As soon as you have a fixed address in Germany, you are obliged to register at the local residents' registration office (Einwohnermeldeamt, Rathaus). Here you receive a copy of your registration (Meldebescheinigung).
The next step involves going to the foreigner registration office (Ausländeramt) to apply for an Aufenthaltsgenehmigung.

e-mail: auslaenderbehoerde@stadt-mainz.de

Correspondance Address:

To apply for the Aufenthaltsgenehmigung, please present the authorities the copy of registration mentioned above and fill out an additional form which is available at information booths or in the waiting areas at the foreign registration office. Finally, you are required to submit everything including a passport photo.

The first Aufenthaltsgenehmigung is valid for 3 months and costs € 10 - € 20. When you are issued this, you will also be told which documents you have to bring with you the next time you visit the foreign registration office. Normally, the officials require documentation of your health insurance, written confirmation from your employer or a copy of your contract with the UMC. Fellowship holders have to submit written proof of this from the UMC.

WORK PERMIT APPLICATIONS

In general, foreigners from non-EU countries, from countries not affiliated with the European Economic Area or who are not married to a citizen of the EU or the European Economic Area require a work permit for Germany.

There are, however, some exceptions. Scientific employees of research institutions financed mostly or solely through public funds do not need a work permit provided their skills and abilities are deemed to be of public interest to Germany. Because of this, most UMC scientists do not require a work permit. Nevertheless, you have to submit a copy of your contract, job description, academic transcript and of your university degree in order to be exempt from applying for a work permit. Foreign fellowship holders do not require a work permit because they are not employees.

All other foreigners, including the spouses of the scientists, require a permit to work in Germany. A permit can be obtained through the Arbeitsagentur’s office for people coming from other countries. There you will receive a form that has to be filled out by yourself as well as by your potential employer. According to German law, you have to wait 4 weeks before receiving a work permit and, you must not work while the application is being processed. Before granting a work permit to a non-EU citizen, the officials have to make sure that no other German or EU citizen can do the job. Also, the officials only grant work permits if the conditions on the job market are suitable.

Work permits have to be renewed every year. In order to receive a residence permit, you must take your work permit to the foreign registration office along with your residents' registration, documentation of health insurance, a valid passport and a passport photo.
SOCIAL SECURITY PLANS

As a result of social security agreements with some countries, guest scientists can apply to be exempt from contributing to the German social security system. In this case, social security payments are automatically transferred to the respective social security plan in the scientist's home country. If you are required to contribute to the German pension plan, you can apply to be reimbursed for these payments, but only after 24 months have lapsed since the end of your employment contract, and only if you were not required to be insured in Germany within this time period. It is important to note that only the employee contributions—and not the employer contributions—will be reimbursed.
